
What's your latest film you worked on?

Posted by Daniel Gourley - 2008/10/26 19:20

Ours obviously was the interview style film, "Sen. Obama I have one question..."

I love simple setups like that because you are really working with actors and performances instead of trying to plan where the camels should go and if the car should blow up before the cliff or after... Okay maybe not quite that extreme, but you get the idea.

So the question is...What was the last film you worked on and can you tell us about the experience?B)

Re:What's your latest film you worked on?

Posted by William Connor - 2008/10/27 13:19

The latest film I worked on was "Fallen Blue" which was featured at the Almost Famous Film Festival. We received two awards, outstanding style and outstanding cinematography. Played the lead role of Federal Agent Connor, along side film veteran Ed Gary!

Re:What's your latest film you worked on?

Posted by Daniel Gourley - 2008/10/28 22:27

Sounds great! Ed seems like a great guy from what I have been hearing from people. What was the gist of the story for "Fallen Blue"?

Re:What's your latest film you worked on?

Posted by Mitchell Wyatt - 2008/10/29 19:53

Last film I worked on (currently am working on) is a student film titled "The Rabbit". Basic story line is that one man saves another from committing suicide, they become great friends, the man who was saved then sacrifices his own life to save another person's life. I'm enjoying it. The group is still in school and learning but they're fun to work with.

Before that was a film called "The Gladiators". A family friendly baseball movie by a local company called Intrigue Films. I was kind of a background player on the team. I was really into watching the crew on this film because they were all really professional and had some pretty sweet gear.

Both lots of fun!

Re:What's your latest film you worked on?

Posted by Daniel Gourley - 2008/10/29 20:18

I love working with other filmmakers in the valley because everyone is talented in their own right and seems to have their own specialty. Everyone has been great to us so far!

Besides, we are such a small community that we all are going to cross paths and we continue to work on projects in AZ.

We can't wait to get "Life in Transit" into production. The script is literally burning a hole in my pocket.:laugh:

Re:What's your latest film you worked on?

Posted by Cori Orłowski - 2008/11/01 11:49

The latest film I worked on was script only and it was Life In Transit. Luckily, we need to make it longer so I get to spend a few more weekends adding to the script :) Yippee. :blink:

Can't wait to get a free day, and if I dont I'll just have to skip out on socializing with the world for a day or two.

=====

Re:What's your latest film you worked on?

Posted by Daniel Gourley - 2008/11/02 11:46

Social life? There is no time for a social life... I've got a job, a business, a wife, 3 kids and a small group. And this is for fun!

Social life is for "normal people" :(

=====

Re:What's your latest film you worked on?

Posted by Rob Douglas - 2008/11/03 07:27

The last film i worked on is the film" Garage Dwellers" It is a great story and it is actually a film the whole family can watch. It is about an Accountant who is tired of his job and needs to find something more to do with his life. My character is his neighbor who when asked by him, Shows him how other people (the garage dwellers) spend their time on the weekends doing what they love in their garage. Perception films is producing the film. And if you read another topic about production companies, Here is an example of some great people to work with.

=====

Re:What's your latest film you worked on?

Posted by Daniel Gourley - 2008/11/03 08:28

Sounds great! Rob, do you have a link to Perception's website? I like the story idea.B)

=====

Re:What's your latest film you worked on?

Posted by Rob Douglas - 2008/11/03 08:45

Here is a link to their website: <http://www.perceptionfilms.com>
Jeff Peterson is the Producer/Director.

=====

Re:What's your latest film you worked on?

Posted by Liana Hubbard - 2008/11/03 09:20

The last film I worked on was "CODE CLIPPERS". I just wrapped up my scenes last night. It was a good experience.

=====

Re:What's your latest film you worked on?

Posted by Daniel Gourley - 2008/11/03 10:04

"Code Clippers" Interesting name.
What's it about?

=====

Re:What's your latest film you worked on?

Posted by Greg Attaway - 2008/11/03 12:31

Reck-and-lma in Tuscon. One scene and four (4) words but damit the most inspiring four (4) words you ever heard!!!

I really do not mind if I have one line or 1000 lines I just love doing this!

Call me crazy

CRAZY :silly:

=====

Re:What's your latest film you worked on?

Posted by Tamara McDaniel - 2008/11/03 13:03

Well, the last film I worked on was The Hierophant, wait, actually, we also did one for the 73 hour challenge called Inner Voices which was after Hierophant - time kind of blurs after awhile - and then because I'm completely demented I have us in for the 36 hour challenge which we'll do the day I get back from LA.....actually, I'm planning to sleep sometime next week. :) I'm with Daniel - social life? what's that? you mean not everyone works 7 days a week spending their "free time" either looking for work or at industry events?....wow - that's really weird. :) LOL

=====

Re:What's your latest film you worked on?

Posted by Joy Daniel - 2008/11/03 13:11

Tamara...did you guys get an extra hour for your challenge, cause we only did a 72-hour... :-D :-D :-D

=====

Re:What's your latest film you worked on?

Posted by Tamara McDaniel - 2008/11/03 19:20

LOL - what can I say? it's been a day....yeah - don't I wish we had an extra hour - ugh. :)

=====